

Inturf unveils new soil conditioner

INTURF is set to launch a new soil conditioner at Harrogate Week 2010.

Designed especially for golf and sports turf applications, TerraCottem Turf harnesses a combination of more than 20 hydroabsorbent and nutritive components to significantly improve soil quality and water retention for healthier, more vigorous turf.

TerraCottem is already a proven product – parent product TerraCottem Universal has been successfully used in largely horticultural settings for the past 15 years in more than 40 countries worldwide.

However, having gained cult status among turf users during that time, the original product was put back into research and development to find a solution specifically for the turf industry, resulting in the creation of new TerraCottem Turf.

Commenting on the product's launch, Inturf's joint managing director Alex Edwards says: "We now have the best of both worlds – proven technology plus added elements to optimise healthy grass growth."
